

On October 4th, Hurricane Matthew slammed directly into the Haitian coastal city of Les Cayes. Over 1,000 people were reportedly killed in the immediate disaster, with many more lives at stake as disease and lack of resources impact the region. Youth4Business director, Coicy Franky, lives in Les Cayes and has been an eyewitness to the devastation. His first text that got through after the storm was “it’s a catastrophe.” Homes, businesses, and farms have been completely leveled.

For the poor of Haiti their shelter and livelihoods have been destroyed. The southern region where Les Cayes is located is also struggling to receive supplies as the main road to the capital of Port-au-Prince was heavily damaged in the storm. Haiti is in dire need of relief support. Youth4Business has answered the call to help by redirecting Coicy’s efforts and our funds to hurricane relief. Coicy is tirelessly sorting through the needs of those around him, finding families that need shelter and the means by which to rebuild their livelihoods.

BEFORE

AFTER: Youth4Business provided the sheets of steel to repair the roof of this home

Youth4Business seeks your assistance in raising funds for hurricane relief. The funds will be used specifically for restoring housing and planting new crops. For less than $50 you can provide a new steel roof to a family.

Youth4Business is providing the concrete to rebuild this family's roof.

School of Notre-Dame and Lapeleide

Youth4Business works in seven schools in the Les Cayes region. Five of these schools have been damaged to the extent that school is not being held until further notice. Three of these schools are private and will not receive funds from the government. Youth4Business seeks to assist them in their rebuild.

The roof of Lycée Sylvain Salnave in Chantal has been blown off.

Thank you for your care and concern for the people of Haiti!

Sincerely,

Ruth, Greg, Leigh, Susie, Janet and Kristen

Any donation you make to Youth4Business is tax-deductible.
